

An unusual and severe case of paclitaxel-induced hand-foot syndrome

Ichrak Ben Abdallah<sup>1</sup>, Sonia Bennaser<sup>1</sup>, Aref Zribi<sup>1</sup>, Jihene Ayari<sup>1</sup>, Sana Fendri<sup>1</sup>, Mehdi Balti<sup>1</sup>, and Abderrazek Haddaoui<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>University of Tunis El Manar Faculty of Medicine of Tunis

September 29, 2020

Abstract

Hand and foot syndrome (HFS) is a toxic dermatologic reaction to chemotherapy, commonly described with capecitabine, 5fluouracile, vinorelbine, and cytarabine. Taxanes are less likely to induce HFS, and very few cases reported paclitaxel-induced HFS. We report a serious case of HFS induced by paclitaxel in a breast cancer female.

Hosted file

Main file.pdf available at <https://authorea.com/users/362766/articles/483808-an-unusual-and-severe-case-of-paclitaxel-induced-hand-foot-syndrome>

