

Many species, including locally rare species, are important for function of mutualist networks

Dylan Simpson<sup>1</sup>, Lucia Weinman<sup>1</sup>, Mark Genung<sup>1</sup>, Michael Roswell<sup>1</sup>, Molly MacLeod<sup>1</sup>, and Rachael Winfree<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Rutgers University

December 13, 2021

Hosted file

Simpson et al - Many bee species, including rare species, are important for function of entire plant-pollinator networks available at <https://authorea.com/users/381800/articles/497707-many-species-including-locally-rare-species-are-important-for-function-of-mutualist-networks>

Hosted file

Simpson et al - Supplement.pdf available at <https://authorea.com/users/381800/articles/497707-many-species-including-locally-rare-species-are-important-for-function-of-mutualist-networks>